THE WONDERFUL MACHINE

Words and music by Linda Arnold

Hello Larry Liver. “Hi.”

Tell me what you do? “Okay.”

“I’m the largest organ in the human body

And I purify you too!”

Hello Sarah Stomach. “Hi.”

Tell me what you do? “Okay.”

“When the food drops in, then I begin

A process called digestion.”

Oh, what a wonderful machine

The human body can be

And each part has a special job

Inside of you and me

Hello Buster Brain. “Hi.”

Tell me what you do? “Okay.”

“I’m the grand computer of the nervous system

And I help you think things through.”

Hello Sally Skeleton. “Hi.”

Tell me what you do? “Okay.”

“If you didn’t have me to hold you up, you see

You’d just be a bag of…jelly!”

Oh, what a wonderful machine

The human body can be

And each part has a special job

Inside of you and me

There’s the eyebrows, the elbows, the kneecaps

The nose, and the nervous system too!

There’s the tongue and the teeth

And the fingers and toes

And the list still isn’t through

There’s the circulatory system

And the respiratory system

And the skeletal system too!

There’s the molecules and chemicals

The tissues and the cells

And the skin that holds it all in you!

Oh, what a wonderful machine

The human body can be

And each part has a special job

Inside of you and me
